A Clarkson College Leadership Series Event

Providing information to health care and community professionals who support patients and families dealing with the long-term health effects of COVID-19.

The COVID-19 impact on human health is just beginning to be understood. For many individuals who test positive for COVID-19, this is not an acute problem. Join Clarkson College in collaboration with the UNMC College of Public Health for a special event educating attendees on managing the needs of those with Long COVID.

Featuring:

James Lawler, MD, MPH, FIDSA
Executive Co-Director,
Global Center for Health Security and Deputy Medical Director,
Nebraska Biocontainment Unit

Caitlin Hebrew, PT, DPT
Instructor of Physical Therapist Assistant,
Clarkson College

Maureen O’Donnell, MS, LIMHP, LADC, CEAP
Counselor, Arbor Family Counseling

Bonnie Dollen, LPN
Long COVID Patient Perspective
Nebraska Medicine

Sarah Flanagan, MSW, MPA, LCSW
Director of Community Health and Interprofessional Education,
Clarkson College

Tuesday, May 25, 2021
5:30–7 p.m. CST via Zoom
Register at:
ClarksonCollege.edu/longcovid/
For participants requesting continuing education credit registration is $10.00.
All other participants may register for free.

Contact hours and continuing education credits are available for specific professions who attend the live event with registration available until May 24 at 4 p.m. CST. Learn more at ClarksonCollege.edu/longcovid/

Outcomes: After the event, health care and community professionals will be able to identify the symptoms of Long COVID, increase their confidence in managing the needs of those with Long COVID, and identify resources available for Long COVID sufferers and their families.

Post-event, attendees will receive a resource packet with helpful information for health care and community professionals, as well as families and patients experiencing the health effects of Long COVID.

For questions, visit ClarksonCollege.edu/longcovid/ or contact Clarkson College Professional Development at 402.552.6148 or professionaldevelopment@clarksoncollege.edu.